Euphoria – Lily King (Maine Author) English anthropologist, Andrew Bankson, has been alone in the field for several years studying the Kiona River Tribe in the Territory of New Guinea. Haunted by the memory of his brothers' deaths, and increasingly frustrated and isolated by his research, Bankson is on the verge of suicide when a chance encounter with colleagues pulls him back from the brink.

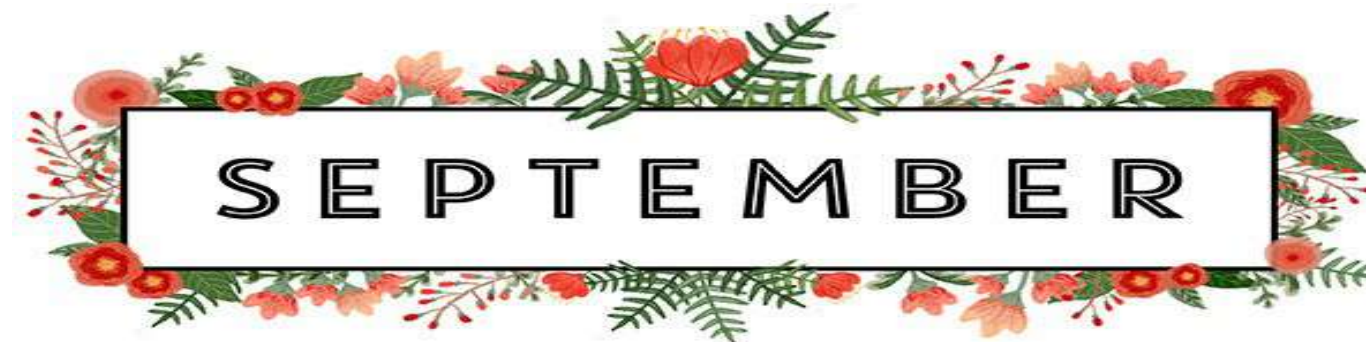

September 27th – 8am to 5pm – class to be held in the hall.

September is a little bit melancholy. It feels like the last burst of summer before the light fades, literally. The air, though not yet crisp, hints at the cooler weather to come. The days, though still long, are only echoes of the abundant sunlight at the height of the summer solstice. But somehow, at the same time, September feels hopeful.

It might be one of the most nostalgic times of the year as summer fades and we leave behind the lazy afternoons spent doing absolutely nothing.

Before we know it, the time rolls around to carve our pumpkins and then the turkey before heading down to the farm to chop down the perfect tree. Somehow, September manages to be the melancholic end to summer's farewell and the cheerful segue into full-on autumn.
